

To Our Clients, Vendors, and Business Relationships,

At this challenging time, health and safety are our primary concern. We encourage everyone to take the precautions recommended by the Centers for Disease Control (CDC) with respect to COVID-19. Take care of your families and your people, especially those who are the most vulnerable.

Shields Legal Group remains open for business. Our team is working remotely and remains committed to supporting the needs of our clients, vendors, and business relationships as we all make our way through this uncertain time.

In this moment, we are all reacting to the rapidly unfolding events across our nation and the world, which are having and will continue to have a profound impact on our individual families and businesses, as well as the U.S. and global economies.

However, the time will come, hopefully sooner rather than later, when we will move beyond crisis management to planning for the recovery of our businesses. There will be many difficult choices to make. Cost-cutting measures as well as investment in future growth will need to be carefully considered.

We are here to support you from crisis management through the recovery process and beyond. Soon, we will share news about a series of webinars we are producing with several channel partners to bring you relevant and timely information essential to the rebuilding and recovery process as we all get back to business after the COVID-19 crisis subsides.

Until then, stay safe and know that Shields Legal Group will be by your side.

Jim Shields
Founder & CEO